[1] Date of the first open access instance, if known. All dates are provided in year format (e.g. 2020) with a note containing additional information, if available. See ‘Citation of 1st OA Instance’ for citation URLs.

[2] Citation to information on the first open access instance, if available. Citations of GLAMs' own communications (e.g. a press release) are preferred. Citations to third party websites and announcements are also included. All linked web resources are backed up using the Internet Archive.

[3] A defined list that includes: Some eligible data; All eligible data. Assignments in this column represent a holistic assessment of the policy approach and are made based on the entry’s own policies or statements.

‘Some eligible data’ indicates some, but not all, of eligible data is published open access (e.g., for specific projects, platforms or outputs) while maintaining non-open access policies for most eligible data. ‘All eligible data’ indicates data is published using open licences and/or public domain tools as a matter of policy.

[4] A defined list that includes Creative Commons open licences and tools, RightsStatements.org labels, bespoke or regional statements and free text statements made by entries.

[5] Where the Primary Rights Statement for Digital Surrogates of Public Domain Objects is non-standard, bespoke or regional, the equivalent standard is indicated only to enable comparisons.

[6] A defined list of categories indicating whether the rights statement is: 1: Public domain compliant; 2: Copyright disclaimer; 3: Open compliant. The category assigned indicates whether the statement used complies the premise that public domain materials should remain in the public domain after digitization.

1: Public domain compliant - No new rights are claimed in the data released. Users are ensured that any public domain materials remain in the public domain in digital form.

2: Copyright disclaimer - No new rights are claimed in the data released and no assertion is made that the data is conclusively in the public domain. The onus is on the user to ensure reuse is legally compliant.

3: Open compliant - New rights are claimed in the data released and the licence applied aligns with international definitions for "open" that permit commercial reuse.

[7] Link to the policy or website terms of use where open access and any rights statements are explained.

[8] Link to the policy explaining how intellectual property is viewed and/or managed in relation to intangible cultural heritage, traditional knowledge and traditional cultural expressions, where made public.

[9] A defined list of rights statements. The rights statement applied to metadata may not be stated explicitly and/or may be set by a platform. For example, all metadata submitted to Europeana must be provided as CC0. Therefore entries publishing open data in Europeana are recorded as CC0 in this column.

[10] Open data volume = number of digital objects made available on open access terms at each web resource.

[11] Open data volume = number of digital objects made available on open access terms at each web resource.

[12] Open data volume = number of digital objects made available on open access terms at each web resource.

[13] Open data volume = number of digital objects made available on open access terms at each web resource.

[200] DM contacted LoC. Reply: 'Thank you for visiting the Library of Congress website and for using the Ask A Librarian service.

I believe you may safely estimate that more than two million items on the Library of Congress website have no known copyright restrictions or are in the public domain.

I do not have an exact number, but the website posts a hint at the bottom left of this page: https://www.loc.gov/search/ . This is the number of items on the website that are available to researchers anywhere, as opposed to those with rights restrictions that allow the digital contents to be limited. Today that figure is nearly 2.5 million items. This figure is not the answer to your question because there are some "digital items," that are difficult for our systems to differentiate and some materials that are available online with permission from their rights holders--a stipulation presented on the website in the at the collection-level documentation or within the metadata for individual items. For example, catalog records for books for with a link to their records' MARC 856 fields, may link to a digital version of the book, but may also link to a publisher's description. This is a limitation of the record format with which we must live, at least for now. The 2.5 million figure also contains items for which the Library has been granted permission to post online; and for 11,000 rights-protected audio files in the National Jukebox collection https://www.loc.gov/search/ that are posted as streaming files, with permission. The site also has items that may be in the public domain, but for which research has not been completed, so these remain restricted for off-site use.'
